

MICHAEL MARTINO

I majored in accounting and received a Bachelor of Science degree. I set semester goals (for GPA) and targeted the type of accounting position I wanted when I graduated.

During four years of college, I worked as a bank teller in New York City. Over the years, I have worked as an auditor, an accounting supervisor for American Airlines, a hotel controller, and hotel general manager.

My advice - Pick an area that really interests you (customer service, accounting, culinary, marketing), and put all of your energy into that job. Create a name for and positive recognition of yourself and allow your hospitality career to take off.
